Amazon rivals ride on Prime Day marketing as protests unfold

Walmart, Target and eBay also jumped in on the now-annual sales day.

REUTERS

Amazon.com Inc.'s Prime Day is now a major marketing opportunity and shopping event in the annual calendar for other U.S. retail companies, rivaling the Thanksgiving holiday's Black Friday as a driver of sales.

Walmart, Target and eBay all run their own special promotions to coincide with the annual sale, which this year Amazon has stretched to two days.

Target announced deal days which will run on the same days as Prime Day — July 15 and 16. Walmart offered promotions from July 14 to 17, while eBay announced a July 15 "crash sale."

"As the awareness of this shopping moment continues to build, we see this as a great opportunity to showcase our competitive advantage on price and inventory," an eBay spokesperson said.

Amazon's breakneck pace of growth, which has seen increasing numbers of shoppers ordering online instead of going to brick-and-mortar stores, is pushing other retailers to respond as they seek to remain competitive.

"There is this enormous halo effect to Prime Day," said Jaysen Gillespie, head of analytics and data science at ads firm Criteo, adding that non-Amazon retailers should experience large increases both in traffic to their websites and in sales.

"The rest of the industry is taking advantage of the free marketing that Jeff Bezos is providing, and they should really send him a thank-you card saying, 'Hey, thanks for the awareness marketing. We'll take care of the conversion and close the deal now on our websites.'"

Some retailers also flaunted no membership fees.

Customers have to join Amazon Prime to get discounts during the 48-hour event. U.S. members of the club pay $119 per year for benefits including one-day shipping, and they tend to buy more goods, more often from the Seattle-based retailer.

The mid-summer shopping event is estimated to bring in $5.8 billion in sales this year for Amazon globally, compared to $3.9 billion last year, according to Coresight Research. Amazon does not disclose figures for revenue generated during Prime Day shopping events.

> "That's telling you that consumers are definitely in the buying mode but are not 100 percent loyal to Amazon."
> Tom Caporaso, Clarus Commerce

Chinese e-commerce giant Alibaba Group reported sales of $30.8 billion during its 24-hour online retail frenzy Singles' Day in 2018.

Last year, when Prime Day lasted 36 hours and faced technical glitches, online shoppers bought more than 100 million products worldwide, at the time recording the largest daily sales for Amazon's own brand of Echo smart speakers, while the Fire TV Stick with Alexa Voice Remote and Echo Dot were the best-selling devices.

Other top-selling products around the world were table salt in India, Coke Zero and Kleenex tissues in Singapore and electric toothbrushes in China.

Pop star Lady Gaga announced a line of beauty products exclusively for sale on Amazon last week, which is available for preorder during the promotional event.

"It's Christmas in July," said Tom Caporaso, chief executive of loyalty platform Clarus Commerce, citing company research that shows roughly 50 percent of consumers say they search other retailers to find the best price on Prime Day.

"That's telling you that consumers are definitely in the buying mode but are not 100 percent loyal to Amazon," he said.

To coincide with Prime Day, more than 2,000 workers at seven Amazon sites across Germany went on strike over pay and conditions for logistics workers for at least two days, labor union Verdi said on Monday.

Other protests have been planned across Europe and the United States, including at an Amazon warehouse in Shakopee in Minneapolis, where workers have scheduled a work stoppage and are demanding improved work conditions. REUTERS

Louisiana cops probe death of civil rights activist

2 Police in Louisiana are investigating the presumed slaying of a prominent civil rights activist and founder of an African-American history museum whose body was found in the trunk of her car in the state capital, Baton Rouge, officials said on Sunday. The remains of Sadie Roberts-Joseph, 75, were discovered on Friday afternoon about 3 miles from her home near the Southern University and A&M College campus, but the cause of her death was not immediately known, according to authorities. Police were led to the victim by an anonymous caller who reported a body in the trunk of a vehicle, Baton Rouge Police Department Sergeant L'Jean Mckneely said by email. Roberts-Joseph's body was discovered as the city braced for the possibility of severe flooding from Tropical Storm Barry, which blew into southern Louisiana as a hurricane on Saturday. REUTERS

Robots to install telescopes to view cosmos from moon

3 As the United States races to put humans back on the moon for the first time in nearly 50 years, a NASA-funded lab in Colorado aims to send robots there to deploy telescopes that will look far into our galaxy, remotely operated by orbiting astronauts. The radio telescopes, to be planted on the far side of the moon, are among a plethora of projects underway by the U.S. space agency, private companies and other nations that will transform the moonscape in the coming decade. "This is not your grandfather's Apollo program that we're looking at," said Jack Burns, director of the Network for Exploration and Space Science at the University of Colorado, which is working on the telescope project. "This is really a very different kind of program and very importantly it's going to involve machines and humans working together," Burns said. REUTERS

Mayor Jim Kenney. CHARLES MOSTOLLER, METRO

Kenney wants cops at permitted events in wake of park shooting

The mayor called on a stronger police presence at public parks following Saturday's Overbrook shooting.

MORGAN ROUSSEAU
morgan@metro.us

Mayor Jim Kenney is calling on the Philadelphia Police Department to amp up its presence at local parks and public events this summer after two men opened fire at a playground cookout over the weekend in West Philly's Overbrook neighborhood.

Seven people were injured just before 9 p.m. Saturday when the two men, aged 18 and 25, opened fire on a group of people attending a cookout and basketball tournament at Baker Playground. No one was killed in the shooting, and all the victims were in stable condition. As of Monday, there were no arrests, and the shooters' motive was unknown.

It was the second mass shooting at a public park in less than a month. On Father's Day weekend, a 24-year-old man was killed and five others injured when a gunman opened fire at a southwest Philadelphia playground.

Now, Kenney wants cops to cover public events that require a permit through the end of the summer.

According to the AP, there were no Philly officers assigned to Saturday's cookout at Baker Playground when 20 shots rang out, even though several hundred people were in attendance.

"Apparently there were so many people and it was so noisy that when police responded, the people on the basketball court were still playing basketball," Philadelphia Police Commissioner Richard Ross told local media. "They didn't even know gunshots had erupted."

On Sunday, community members gathered to discuss a strategy to combat local gun violence. CBS reported that speakers pointed to "the perception of young men of color, a lack of opportunity and jobs."

Recent police data shows nearly 1,300 reports of aggravated assaults with a gun this year, which is a 9 percent increase over the same time period last year.

"You tell them they're a gangster, they're going to believe," one person said, according to the report. "You tell them they're an animal, they're going to believe, and you act accordingly."

‘Squad’ of Democrats, other lawmakers blast Pres. Trump’s ‘racist’ attacks

The president doubled down, saying, “If you’re not happy here, you can leave.”

President Donald Trump doubled down on his attacks against four U.S. congresswomen on Monday and dismissed concerns that his comments were racist, prompting outrage from Democrats, who moved to condemn him in the House of Representatives.

Speaking at the White House, Trump said people he described as critical of the United States should leave the country.

Those remarks followed his Twitter messages on Sunday that said the four left-wing lawmakers, known in Congress as “the squad,” should go back to “the totally broken and crime-infested places from which they came.”

All four of the first-term House members are U.S. citizens and all but one were born in the United States.

“If you’re not happy in the U.S., if you’re complaining all the time, very simply: You can leave,” he said, drawing scattered applause from a crowd of businesspeople.

Trump did not identify the lawmakers by name in his Sunday tweets, but he appeared to refer to Reps. Alexandria Ocasio-Cortez of New York, Ilhan Omar of Minnesota, Ayanna Pressley of Massachusetts and Rashida Tlaib of Michigan.

> “As far as I’m concerned, if you hate our country, if you’re not happy here, you can leave.”
> President Trump

All four have been critical of Trump, as well as of the current Democratic leaders of the House, straining party unity in that chamber.

At a press conference on Capitol Hill, the four lawmakers said Trump was trying to sow division and distract attention from what they characterized as failed policies on immigration, health care and taxation.

“Weak minds and leaders challenge loyalty to our country in order to avoid challenging and debating the policy,” Ocasio-Cortez said.

Tlaib and Omar repeated their calls for Trump to be impeached.

Trump has a history of what critics consider race-baiting. He led a movement that falsely claimed former President Barack Obama was not born in the United States, and he said after a deadly, white supremacist-led rally in Charlottesville, Virginia, that “both sides” were to blame for violence there.

“This is the agenda of white nationalists, whether it is happening in chat rooms, or it’s happening on national TV, and now it’s reached the White House garden,” Omar said.

Although most Republicans stayed silent on Trump’s divisive rhetoric, several began expressing concern late on Monday.

House Republican Leader Kevin McCarthy said the four lawmakers belonged in the United States. “This is their country,” he told reporters.

Texas Rep. Will Hurd, the only African-American Republican in the House, called the attacks “racist” on CNN.

Tim Scott, the Senate’s only black Republican, called them “racially offensive” on Twitter.

Others did not go that far. Sen. Mitt Romney, the party’s 2012 presidential nominee, and Sen. Marco Rubio, who ran in 2016, both condemned the remarks but declined to characterize them as racist. REUTERS

FOREMAN FORECAST: TRUMP'S ANGRY MOB

ANALYSIS

TOM FOREMAN

Here is a question for Republicans: Is it worth it?

All those conservative judges you're getting from the White House, the tax plan, the turmoil in world relations, the surging economy, the railing against immigrants, and the dismantling of all things Obama.

I know many of you just love all that, but again — is it enough to offset the growing public perception that your party is comfortable with a racist in charge?

Now, you may feel such a claim is overblown, but President Donald Trump's Twitterburst aimed at four Democratic women of color is not helping your argument. When he tweeted that these women should "go back and help fix the totally broken and crime-infested places from which they came," he echoed that old racist trope: You don't look like us. You're not from here. You're not really an American. Go away.

Of course, you weren't shocked. After all, he was your party's top pusher of the fake Obama birther conspiracy. He often flings vaguely veiled ethnic slurs at minorities. Even as he defended himself against the most recent accusations of racism, he sounded … well, kind of racist.

Bear in mind that these women are all, absolutely, American citizens. They are duly elected members of Congress backed by tens of thousands of other Americans, and neither their color, religion, gender or background should make an ounce of difference.

And while Trump has every right to disagree with their policies, he chose instead to open fire on their legitimacy, their patriotism, their very being. Yet, there has been barely a trickle of Republican lawmakers willing to stand up and say they disapprove of his tactics.

In my decades of reporting, I've known plenty of Republicans who have proudly proclaimed their conservative principles, and derided Democrats as weak, wishy-washy, and unwilling to speak against wrongdoing in their own party.

But where are those Republicans now, as a portion of their party's integrity burns on the pyre of bigotry? I don't know. Perhaps they are lounging in a backroom of the Capitol, hoisting a toast to Trump, and saying yes, yes … it's worth it.

Rep. Ayanna Pressley.

U.S. Rep. Ilhan Omar, Democrat of Minnesota.

Trump administration moves to stop asylum seekers

All applicants will be required to pursue their claims in a third country.

A general view of ICE facilities as communities brace for a reported wave of ICE deportation raids in Miami. REUTERS

The Trump administration on Monday moved to bar almost all immigrants from applying for asylum at the country's southern border, requiring them to first pursue their claims in a third country they traveled through before seeking safe haven in the United States.

The Department of Homeland Security, in a statement issued with the Department of Justice, said the interim rule would set a "new bar" for immigrants "by placing further restrictions or limitations on eligibility for aliens who seek asylum in the United States."

The ACLU called the new rule "patently unlawful" and vowed to sue.

The rule would make it all but impossible for applicants seeking protection from persecution unless they first apply for asylum in a "third country" such as Mexico or Guatemala, through which they traveled en route to the U.S.

It was just short of a "nuclear option, close to something like shutting down the border," said Jessica Vaughan from the Center for Immigration Studies, which supports increased immigration restrictions.

The change would also place an even higher burden on Mexico, which has been somewhat cooperative with U.S. efforts to slow Central American immigration. Mexico's foreign ministry said it had seen the interim rule and would respond on it.

Guatemala, which both sends migrants to the United States and receives Hondurans and Salvadorans passing through, said on Sunday it would postpone President Jimmy Morales' visit to Washington to discuss Guatemala's potential designation as a "safe third country" for asylum seekers, stressing it had no plans to sign such an agreement.

The proposed changes, set to become official on Tuesday, represent the latest effort by the Trump administration to crack down on immigration, the signature issue that helped propel Trump to the White House in the 2016 election and one already figuring prominently in the 2020 campaign.

Trump on Monday declared "very successful" what he had billed as a sweeping operation to arrest undocumented immigrants this past weekend. U.S. authorities launched small-scale operations aimed at about 2,000 recently-arrived families in about 10 cities. REUTERS

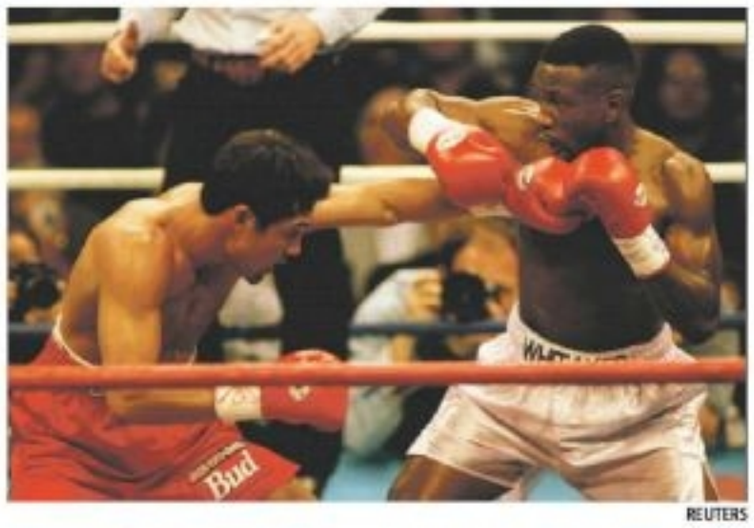
‘Sweet Pea’ Whitaker dies after being hit by car



REUTERS

Former world champion Pernell “Sweet Pea” Whitaker has died after being hit by a vehicle in Virginia Beach, Virginia, according to police. He was 55.

Whitaker was a world champion in four divisions — WBC lightweight, IBF light welterweight, WBC welterweight and WBA light middleweight. He retired in 2001 after compiling a 40-4-1 record including 17 knockouts and later worked as a trainer.

A member of the International Boxing Hall of Fame, Whitaker was named boxer of the year by Ring magazine in 1989. He also won an Olympic gold medal in 1984.

Whitaker was pronounced dead at a Virginia Beach intersection on Sunday night after police were called to the scene of an accident, a police report said.

The driver of the vehicle remained at the scene and the accident is still under investigation, police added.

Many top athletes and celebrities took to Twitter to add their condolences, including former heavyweight champion Mike Tyson, who tweeted: “I’m truly lost for words to hear Pernell ‘Sweet Pea’ Whitaker is no longer with us. He was a flawless fighter. Condolences to his family.”

Former NFL quarterback Michael Vick, a Virginia native, added: “‘Sweet Pea’ Whitaker was our hometown legend and the greatest of all time. My prayers are with his family and loved ones.”

MC Hammer also added: “‘Sweet Pea’ kept a smile on everyone’s face, in and out of the ring. We had some fun times together. Gone to [sic] soon. R.I.P. my Friend. R.I.P.” REUTERS

The hallway in front of our mailboxes looks like what I imagine the work area of the USPS looks like. Forty-pound boxes I cannot move to get to my box, to little boxes that would be for a book or video, rest there from a.m. to p.m., seven days a week. Some are left outside the locked inner door, some just thrust inside. Some tossed at the doors for the first-floor apartments, some left on the foyer floor or near the steps. When did we become an outpost of the mailing industry? How is maintenance able to do floor cleaning? And WHY aren't USPS employees taking the return-mail basket left full, overflowing, for weeks at a time? I even find my mail put in there on the same days I get mail in the box!!!

Aries Don't feel that you must make a change because someone else does, or wants you to. Use your expertise and knowledge to ensure that you do what's best for you.

Taurus You'll be torn between what you should do and what you want to do. Look for alternative ways to take care of your responsibilities and still have time for a little fun.

Gemini You decide what's good for you. Don't let anyone interfere in your plans or hold you back from doing what you think is best. Put yourself first.

Cancer Get the facts and consider the possibilities before you jump in to something that could end up costing you. You'll have only yourself to blame if you don't do the proper research.

Leo Keep your opinions to yourself. If someone reaches out to you, listen to them, but avoid sharing personal information or plans for now. Poise and patience will pay off.

Virgo Change begins with you. Review what you've done and put together a list of what you want to pursue. Organization and preparation will help you avoid excess and maintain control.

Libra Take a break. Give yourself time to mull over the demands being put on you. Look for a rational way to get what you want without letting anger set in.

Scorpio If you crave change or excitement, get in the groove and make it happen. Traveling, learning and interacting with people you find interesting will be gratifying and educational.

Sagittarius You know the rules, but sometimes they aren't easy to follow. Refuse to let anyone persuade you to do something you shouldn't do or spend your money on something you don't need.

Capricorn If you don't like something, change it. It's your life, and putting up with something that doesn't feel right will gnaw away at you until you take action.

Aquarius Wait for the best time to make your move. Timing will be crucial if you don't want to face opposition. Anger will not solve anything, but precision and expertise will.

Bam Bam's enticing ARW options. ALL PHOTOS AVERSA PR

What's for dinner?

Ardmore Restaurant Week runs until July 28.

MOLLY GIVEN
Molly.Given@metro.us

Although the City of Brotherly Love certainly heats up in the summer, the Main Line is home to one of the hottest culinary events of the season, and it recently kicked off with a delicious bang. Ardmore Restaurant Week is now in full swing, and any Philadelphian can take advantage of the prix-fixe lunch and dinner specials until July 28. Most lunch offerings come out to $10-$15, and three-course dinners run $15-$35 at participating hot spots.

"Ardmore Restaurant Week is one of our most anticipated events of the year," said Ardmore Initiative Executive Director Nancy Scarlato in a release. "Ardmore is one of the fastest-growing dining destinations in the area and Ardmore Restaurant Week gives us a chance to celebrate established Ardmore favorites and introduce our newcomers — now with lunch AND dinner options. We are excited to announce that 20 Ardmore restaurants will be participating and are curating their menus now! Save the date and start making your plans now!"

So where should you go? Ardmore Restaurant Week truly does have something for everyone, even the pickiest of eaters.

Bam Bam Seoul Kitchen

Mouthwatering dishes from Besito.

Local Wine and Kitchen
Local Wine and Kitchen is offering the perfect dining experience for ARW. Delicious dinner options include warm spring pea soup, Amish half-chicken, a rotating selection of cheese, watercress radicchio salad, a rotating selection of cakes for dessert and much more. 39 Lancaster Ave., localwineandkitchen.com

Positano Ristorante
Taste a little slice of Italian heaven when dining at this culinary hot spot during Ardmore Restaurant Week. Enticing dishes include ravioli aurora with prosciutto and peas, shrimp scampi red or white over Capellini pasta, broiled salmon Calabrese with olives and capers, arugula fennel salad with cherry tomatoes in a Gorgonzola dressing, Limoncello cake and more. 21 W. Lancaster Ave., positanoristorante.com

Besito
If you want to take your taste buds on a fiesta ride, Besito is the perfect destination for ARW. The culinary hot spot is offering a plethora of Mexican-inspired dishes for lunch and dinner including empanadas de costillas, iron skillet tacos, crispy chicken tacos, quesadilla options, tres leches cake and much more. 105 Coulter Ave., besitoardmore.com

The Bercy
The Bercy is truly taking their ARW menu up a notch this year. The French-inspired hot spot will be offering plenty of delicious dinner options including country pate, summer corn chowder, seared Scottish salmon, grilled steak "au poivre," strawberry marscarpone mousse, a selection of ice creams and sorbets and much more. 7 Lancaster Ave., thebercy.com

Ardmore Q
If you are craving some juicy, saucy and savory barbeque in your life, Ardmore Q should be your first pick for Ardmore Restaurant Week. The BBQ hot spot is serving up irresistible dinner specials including smoked jumbo wings, Chipotle dippers, half-pound of smoked and brined chicken, half-pound of St. Louis ribs, half-pound of Italian sausage, mac & cheese and more. 64 Rittenhouse Pl., ardmoreq.com

'Crawl' is the summer movie we've all been waiting for

The mere premise of "Crawl" is enough to make most people shudder with fear.

GREGORY WAKEMAN
GregoryWakeman@metro.us

Kaya Scodelario and Barry Pepper star as Haley and Dave, a daughter and father who aren't just trapped and on the cusp of drowning in their basement during a Category 5 hurricane, but who are also surrounded by a number of hungry alligators, too.

Director Alexandre Aja revels in tapping into these fears throughout "Crawl," showing us how smart, swift and deadly the alligators are with several gory sequences, while the tight and cramped surroundings of the basement, and just how trapped the two characters are, makes it feel increasingly claustrophobic.

"I wanted to design the movie as a roller-coaster ride," Aja tells Metro. "I was looking to do something very scary and to make a suspense movie. It was very important for me to generate the fear. I wanted the film to feel like it was always building and building and building, to give it that fun element."

While Aja references the likes of Ridley Scott's "Alien" and the 1983 adaptation of Stephen King's "Cujo" as influences for "Crawl," he insists that he found most of the inspiration for his shots and setups from thousands of hours of crocodile and alligator footage on the internet.

All of that would have been useless, though, if Aja hadn't landed his first choice for the lead role of Haley, Kaya Scodelario.

"Kaya has this determination in her eyes," insists Aja. "She has this badass attitude. She is a warrior. That was so necessary for her character to exist." Luckily for Aja, Scodelario instantly saw a number of reasons to sign up for "Crawl," too.

"I was told they needed a strong, powerful and kickass survival chick," she recalls. "I read the script, and compared to most of the others I had read that year, it was one of the most feminist. It is very rare for a female actor to get her own movie for a major studio where being a female isn't the central characteristic of the person. This is a story about an athlete trying to reconnect with her father and deal with a very intense situation and get through it."

But while Scodelario was excited by the intensity of the shoot, which saw her work all day, every day, for six straight weeks in particularly cold water, she was also delighted to be involved in a quintessential summer movie.

"It is pure escapism and fun! You want to see it with an audience and be surrounded by people that are screaming and jumping and laughing all at the same time. It is a chance to just immerse yourself in a different world."

"Crawl" feels especially unique as it is one of the only original movies in a summer schedule packed full of sequels, reboots and franchises, and Aja believes that genre movies like "Crawl" can provide the originality that is severely lacking in Hollywood at the moment.

"There has been a series of films in recent years — 'The Conjuring,' 'Don't Breathe,' 'A Quiet Place' — that were very original and were also studio movies with very comfortable budgets. I find it interesting because for many years you had the choice of making either a very, very low-budget genre film or a very big blockbuster. The mid-budget movie was over. But now it seems like it is coming back."

"Crawl" is now in theaters.

Iration hits the road with their "Live From Paradise" tour. DAN HODGSON

Riding the wave to 'Paradise'

Iration's Micah Pueschel gives Metro the scoop on the band's "Live From Paradise" tour.

MOLLY GIVEN
Molly.Given@metro.us

Iration is here to make waves this summer, and not just with the typical reggae crowd. The Hawaii-based group came out with their latest self-titled album just a year ago, and the band is now hitting the road with their "Live From Paradise" tour with Pepper, Fortunate Youth and Katastro for an explosion of different sounds, unique energies and overall positive vibes. What sets Iration apart — and this is apparent with their latest album — is the fact that you can't pin them down to one distinct category. Iration guitarist and lead singer Micah Pueschel sat down with Metro to give the scoop on what inspires the band, chat about why music is meant to evolve, and discuss what to expect from their tour this summer.

I wanted to chat a bit about your latest self-titled album that came out last year. What went into making it so unique and distinctive?

So we kind of picked up where we left off with the album we had before this, "Hotting Up," and we also worked with a new producer. It was a little bit of a different process: We would get into the studio with him and work on things and make demo beats, and then work on writing the songs from that kind of standpoint. With "Hotting Up," 50 percent of the songs were already written, and we wrote the second half with him. We were figuring each other out and how we work together as a group. So once we finished with that, we kept writing and started to hit our stride. We just wanted to keep writing songs, it didn't matter what genre it was or what it sounded like. "Iration" was written over a large span of time because we were touring in between and that's why it's so eclectic; we were just writing over different points in a two-year cycle. We were just working on [different styles] of songs and seeing where it took us.

You mention not just sticking to one type of genre with this album. Do you think bands and artists sometimes feel pressure to stick to one sound?

One hundred percent. I think you have a core band base that likes you probably because of your initial sound or first records or whatever record that was the most popular that got you started. I think people attach to those things and have a very deep kind of connection to those records and sounds, and so if you start to branch away from that and move to different places, you risk your core fan base getting upset or being like, "This isn't what I signed up for initially." You kind of run the risk of people jumping ship. Bands want to evolve, especially songwriters. It is an art, it is an expression, and we are creating, so you never want to just keep recycling the same thing over and over again. That would just be boring and it's not what it's about. There's a fine line. We always say that we will do something but we also know there is a number of people that we sort of have to please with records, so an album has to have a little bit of both.

Since we are on the subject of writing and what fans get out of your music, what do you hope fans take away from your songs rather than it just being beachy reggae music?

I think that's exactly what we strive to do, not be just recycled reggae music with random beats and random images or whatever. We really strive to make a song that tells a story and has a message, whatever that message may be. What we're really trying to do is create a connection in whatever way the listener finds it. We don't try to be uber-specific with songs, we do that on purpose. We want people to take what they will from the songs because we make music for ourselves, but we do also make it as a product that we give to people — people have to connect to it. It's from a true place, it is our experience, but we try to make it come from a broad subject matter that everybody can connect to, no matter where you're from. We have songs that have that linear story and then we have songs that are more about a message or a feeling, or love and heartbreak. We try to mix it up and we don't try to stick to one thing.

Jumping to your "Live From Paradise" tour, how does it feel hitting the road with Pepper, Fortunate Youth and Katastro?

We're four bands that have been in this genre for a while, so it's very comfortable. Everybody's friendly and we have a good time. It's much better when you're on tour with bands you know and bands that you can hang out with before and after the show. No weird vibes or egos. Plus all of the bands in the package all bring something different.

Throughout the summer months we'll be taking a glance at every NFL team, with a focus on the betting opportunities at MetroBet.us/Sugar. Today we'll examine the Jets, who had one of the more tumultuous offseasons in their history (which is saying something).

Here are the current betting odds for the Jets at MetroBet.us/Sugar:

Over/Under win total: 7.5 games

To make playoffs: Yes (+275) No (-360)

To win Super Bowl: +6000

For all of the jokes about new head coach Adam Gase's whacky eyes, and his proclivity to get well-liked general managers fired, we have already seen that he can quickly (albeit briefly) turn around a franchise.

The Dolphins had season records at .500 or less for six straight years until Gase showed up in 2016, as he turned a 6-10 squad into a 10-6 team that made the playoffs.

This Jets group that Gase now inherits is immensely more talented than that 2016 Miami team, as Gang Green added Le'Veon Bell, Kelechi Osemele and Jamison Crowder to its offense. Of course, to make this thing work, second-year QB Sam Darnold will need to make a Carson Wentz-like jump from Year 1 to Year 2. No easy task.

Darnold dropped hints last year, though, that he may be ready to lead the Jets back to the postseason. He improved drastically as the 2018 season progressed, particularly in the final four games of the season when he tossed a combined six touchdown passes while throwing just one pick. In those final four games of 2018 he also posted an average passer rating of 96.6.

Gase got the absolute best out of a banged-up Ryan Tannehill and longtime backup Matt Moore in 2016. Darnold has more raw tools than both of them, so the sky is the limit in 2019 under Gase's watch.

New Jets defensive coordinator Gregg Williams hasn't overseen a top-ranked defense since the first term of the Obama administration, but the 2019 Jets D will be helped greatly by the addition of No. 3 overall pick Quinnen Williams (DE) out of Alabama.

I like the Jets for nine or 10 wins in a soft AFC East (they'll also match up against the NFC East, which features layups against the Giants and Redskins).

The play: $5 on the Jets Over 7.5 wins

The way to look at NBA contracts is to ask whether a player will have a positive or negative trade value while under the deal. Ben Simmons will have a positive trade value through the next 6 years while he's locked under contract.

Phillies vs. Dodgers game pick

The Dodgers have a decided advantage in the pitching department on Tuesday as they send Walker Buehler (8-1, 3.46 ERA) to the mound at Citizens Bank Park to face Vince Velasquez (2-5, 4.63 ERA).

Prior to his seven-run debacle at Coors Field on June 27, Buehler had allowed one earned run or fewer in four consecutive starts on the road. The Vanderbilt product has had no problem pitching deep into games for L.A. since the beginning of May, averaging over 6 2/3 innings per start (11 outings). Velasquez was taken out of Philadelphia's rotation after a shaky first seven starts, and he's done little since being added back due to injuries to inspire confidence. His ERA in his last four starts is 5.94. The Dodgers have had Velasquez's number for years now, as Cody Bellinger, Joc Pederson and Justin Turner have a combined seven hits off the California native in just 18 total at-bats.

Sixers ink Simmons to max extension

The 76ers secured their star guard for the long haul.

JOE PANTORNO
joseph.pantorno@metro.us

The Philadelphia 76ers and star point guard Ben Simmons agreed to a five-year, $170 million contract extension on Monday, according to The Athletic's Shams Charania.

It's the maximum contract that the Sixers could have possibly offered Simmons as he is still on his rookie deal. The 22-year-old was eligible to sign such a deal on July 1.

The extension secures Simmons in Philadelphia until 2025. He is set to make $8.1 million in the final year of his original rookie deal during the 2019-20 season before the extension kicks in.

Had a deal not come this summer, Simmons would have had a $10.5 million qualifying offer for the 2020-21 season before becoming a restricted free agent.

Per ESPN's Bobby Marks, Simmons is projected to make $29.5 million in 2020-21, $31.59 million in 2021-22, $33.93 million in 2022-23, $36.27 million in 2023-24, and $38.61 million in 2024-25.

Simmons is coming off a second NBA season in which he garnered his first-ever All-Star nod, averaging 16.9 points, 8.8 rebounds and 7.7 assists per game.

At 6 feet 10 inches, he is built like a power forward but possesses the athleticism and skill set of a point guard, which is why the 76ers slated the youngster as the franchise's floor general of the future after taking him with the first-overall pick of the 2016 NBA Draft.

The Australian native is slowly developing up to those expectations, averaging 16.4 points, 8.5 rebounds and 7.9 assists over his first 160 career NBA games. Alongside Joel Embiid, Tobias Harris and the now-departed Jimmy Butler and JJ Redick, Simmons helped the 76ers get to within a game of the Eastern Conference Finals last season.

Even with the organization reaching new heights following a miserable start to the decade, there were plenty of question marks surrounding Simmons' worth.

His shooting ability from mid-range and beyond the arc has lagged, which led many to believe that his offensive game will never get to that top tier.

He shot just 20.9 percent from mid-range last season. It gets even worse the further you get from the basket as he's only attempted 17 3-pointers over his first two seasons. He has yet to hit any of them.

A jump shot can be nurtured, however.

Simmons already possesses the intangibles needed to star in the NBA and he has already shown that. If he continues to develop at this rate while adding that jumper, he could very well average a triple-double at some point during his career.

FARM SYSTEM FAILURES PLAYING PART IN PHILS' SLUMP

THE SPORTS PROFESSOR

GLEN MACNOW
@RealGlenMacnow

Look, I'm not saying Andrew Knapp is the cause of the Phillies' current problems. It's more like he's a symptom.

Knapp has a .155 batting average and 31 percent strikeout rate. He may be the worst offensive player in baseball. And as a defender, he's no Carlos Ruiz — throwing out 10 percent of opposing base stealers and failing to block balls in the dirt.

Still, the backup catcher has been called upon in several recent clutch situations, coming in with the game on the line. It hasn't turned out well. He has produced just seven hits in his last 31 games.

Knapp is the baseball equivalent of hoisting up the white flag. He's a signal to beat the crowd for the exits when PA announcer Dan Baker introduces him as a pinch hitter.

Again, that's not Knapp's fault. If you hand anyone a Major League paycheck, he'll put on the uniform. It's not even Gabe Kapler's fault. Given roster composition, the manager usually begins games with just four bats on the bench.

So let's use Knapp to represent two larger failings of the franchise.

First, with few exceptions, the Phillies' farm system has not produced plus-level batting talent for ages. Let's list the top-quality hitters arising from the minors since the glory days of Rollins-Utley-Howard:

Rhys Hoskins, for sure. Perhaps Scott Kingery, if he continues to develop. Cesar Hernandez is an adequate offensive infielder.

Andrew Knapp, among others, is a Phillies homegrown product who has not achieved much success in the pros. GETTY IMAGES

And then . . . ? I'm blanking.

Meanwhile, the Braves boast four homegrown hitters 25 or younger who have combined this season for more than 70 homers and 200 RBIs. The quartet of Ozzie Albies, Dansby Swanson, Austin Riley and Ronald Acuna Jr. figures to get better in coming seasons.

Hey, it was exhilarating when the Phillies committed $440 million to bolster the lineup with Bryce Harper, J.T. Realmuto, Jean Segura and Andrew McCutchen. But that was also necessitated by the franchise's own ineptitude in scouting and development.

I'm not even talking about pitching here. That's another rant for another column.

Which leads to the second issue. Despite principal owner John Middleton's past statements that he's going to "win or die trying," it became apparent last week that fans shouldn't expect a midseason splash.

In a rare appearance, President Andy MacPhail suggested the team is more than a player or two away from winning this year's World Series and will likely stand pat through the July 31 trade deadline.

No rescue for a ravaged rotation. No center fielder to replace the loss of McCutchen and the suspended Odubel Herrera. Not even, perhaps, a legitimate backup catcher better than the aforementioned Knapp to come off the bench and give the Phils a fighting chance.

MacPhail's defeatist blather was the last thing fans wanted to hear this year. Hey, remember how excited we all were back in the spring?

But behind MacPhail's buzzkill, I think, was this message: How are they supposed to sell the farm to win when they've got nothing there to sell?

The problem isn't that MacPhail and Co. won't spend in futures to acquire current help. It's that they don't have much to offer.

It's been a long time since the pipeline produced front-line position players. And it doesn't appear from here that Roman Quinn and Adam Haseley are the next generation. Mickey Moniak, the top overall pick from 2016, is hitting .267 with four homers in Reading. Maybe Alec Bohm is the answer.

And as long as this farm system fails to thrive, John Middleton will have to continue writing those huge offseason checks.

ARE YOU 65-80 YEARS OLD AND INTERESTED IN PARTICIPATING IN A PAID RESEARCH STUDY?

The Neuroeconomics Lab at Temple University is conducting a research study investigating neural and physiological processes. We are looking for people ages 65 to 80 to participate in this 2-part study. During the appointments, you and a friend will be asked to complete surveys and play computer games, and one of you will undergo an MRI brain scan while playing the games. This study will require two separate appointments at Temple University Main Campus.

Payment: $25 per hour inside the scanner and $10 per hour outside the scanner – with the opportunity to earn up to $100 extra.

Eligibility requirements:

- No current psychiatric or neurological illness
- Between the ages of 65-80
- Able to bring an eligible friend to one study appointment
- Must have a phone number or email address for researchers to contact you

The study will provide you with a research report from any cognitive assessments you complete and non-medical images of your brain upon request.
